(3) SYLLABUS

Since the 2022–23 academic year, two officially established studios have been operating within the department under the Sculpture specialization, each with a distinct focus within the field of contemporary sculpture. The subject matter, teaching methods, and research approaches are defined and regularly updated by the faculty members leading the studios. During the first semester, students are introduced to the basic principles of representational sculpture, with an emphasis on the perception and relief representation of three-dimensional space. They are also familiarized with contemporary approaches to sculpture as an expanded art practice.

Throughout the semester, students complete specific assignments supported by lectures that address form-related and visual perception issues in sculptural practice. These include life drawing (from a model and compositional studies), exercises in spatial perception (clay sketches, reliefs, sculptures in the round), mold making, and reproduction techniques. In addition, a themed project is assigned and developed over the course of the semester

It involves the exhibition/presentation in the studio of the visual projects produced, taking into account the degree of responsiveness to the assignment criteria, thematic consistency, clarity of the written component, preparation and technical skill, as well as the demonstration of well-informed critical thinking. All discussions related to the evaluation of examination deliverables take place in the presence of all students participating in the examination process. The assessment criteria are accessible to students both in the studio and via the e-course platform.
