Training in laboratory courses and the cultivation of visual thinking and creativity culminate in the thesis project.

Thesis Presentation:

The student prepares and presents a cohesive visual work based on a thematic unit, exhibiting the complete project and defending it before examiners and the public.

Objective:

Building on a deeper understanding of visual language and its vocabulary, the evolution of the visual research process, and methodologies for developing thematic content and representation strategies, the student embarks on their thesis. This thesis constitutes a clear and expressive visual proposal that highlights personal style, conceptual narrative, and strategic communication with the viewer—essentially reflecting the student-artist's position and vision.

Semester Development:

Under the guidance and support of a supervising professor of their choice, the student completes and presents an original visual work alongside its theoretical framework. The student may also showcase intermediate stages of their visual research and development drawn from previous years of study and artistic apprenticeship within the Department.
